Man is arrested after bomb alert

BY JENNIE BAKER, RUTH NORRIS
& CHRIS HAVERGAL

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

POLICE investigating an explosive package at an office building in Cambridge have arrested a man in Burwell.

The force said the device, which was placed in Wellington House in East Road, Cambridge, had the potential to cause injury. Monday's scare led to the evacuation of offices and part of Anglia Ruskin University.

A 27-year-old man was arrested in connection with the incident on Monday evening and a house in Toyse Lane, Burwell, was cordoned off and searched.

He was still in police custody at Parkside police station yesterday (Wednesday).

A bomb squad team was called in when the alarm was raised at Wellington House on Monday.

On Monday, the device was removed from the building for forensic examination and office staff were allowed to return.

A police spokesman said: "The device could have had potential to cause a small explosion and injure anybody nearby."

On Tuesday, police investigations were concentrated on the house in Burwell, where residents said there was a constant police presence throughout the day.

A neighbour, Kevin Rudd, 55, said he and his partner had heard the police helicopter flying overhead at 9.45pm on Monday.

He said: "It had been flying around for a while, then I looked outside and there were police cars parked, two directly outside and another one nearby."

Rosemary Moore, 66, his partner, said: "When you stop and think this is so close to your home, it's unsettling. You cannot believe it."

A woman who lives in the road who did not want to be named, said: "I heard the helicopter for about an hour. I fell asleep with it still going on at 10.20pm. It must have been really close because it was quite loud."

A man who lives in Toyse Lane, who did not want to be named, said he had seen police cars outside the house at 8am on Tuesday when he and his partner had left the house.

He said: "When we drove out this morning my partner noticed there was a police cordon across the front of their house."

"There has been a constant police presence there all day since 8am."

Therapy sessions to raise charity cash

WIGGLE your toes to show your support for Macmillan Cancer Support tomorrow. Christine Charters-Young and Michelle Hales will be raising awareness of World Reflexology Week by offering 20-minute taster sessions of the complementary therapy – in return for a donation to the charity. The White Tara Complementary Health and Beauty Clinic in All Saints Road, Newmarket, is playing host to the reflexologists for the afternoon and will be serving cream teas during the event, which will take place between 4pm and 8pm. Therapy demonstrations and a raffle will also be held in the studio. For more information and to book your taster session, call Christine on (01223) 654552.

Theatre set to ring to country sounds

A COUNTRY music duo will be taking to the stage at the Kings Theatre in Newmarket on Saturday. Country Company's concert at the Fitzroy Street venue will start at 7.30pm. Tickets cost £10 and are available from the box office on (01638) 663337 and on the door.

Pipers to serenade Saturday shoppers

HEAR a Suffolk pipe band play outside Newmarket's Guineas Shopping Centre on Saturday. The Bury St Edmunds-based Glenmoriston Pipe Band will start their performance at 10.30am. The band's Modern Grant tartan harks back to Iain Grant, of Glenmoriston Old Farm Whisky, its original sponsor.

Lions show they've got a lot of bottle

NEWMARKET Lions did a roaring trade in special bottles designed to save medics time which they handed out for free in the Guineas shopping centre on Tuesday. Six members of the charity group manned a stall outside Marks & Spencer to hand out little green and white containers as part of the Message in a Bottle scheme. The idea is for vulnerable people to fill in a form with their personal information, illnesses, next of kin, medication and doctor's details, pop it into the bottle and leave it in their fridge, as well as placing a sticker on their door pointing the emergency services to the container if the householder needs help. Christine Rawlinson, of the Lions, said: "This time saving idea can save lives as the medical profession knows valuable details about the patient instantly and can then start to help. "It can be the difference between a person living or dying and at a very small cost to us but at no cost at all to the recipient so great for everyone to get involved with. "We were there for quite a busy session today and the six of us probably gave away about 100 bottles. A lot of people had already got one or knew about the scheme already which is great, and some people took them for their friends or neighbours who live alone. "We have left some with the Newmarket Day Centre if anybody wants one who we didn't manage to speak to just pop in to reception and ask for one." To find out more about the organisation, drop in to one of their twice-monthly meetings at 8pm at the Rutland Arms Hotel's bar on the first and third Thursday of every month.

Recycling plea as centres cut hours

SATURDAY will see Suffolk County Council-run household waste recycling centres reduce their opening hours for the winter. The centres, including Mildenhall's facility, will close at 4pm between Monday and Friday, one hour earlier than at present, while the sites' Sunday opening hours will remain the same. Newmarket Open Door's community reuse and recycling centre's opening hours will stay at 10am to 4pm seven days a week. The council is encouraging people to brave the autumn and winter weather and keep recycling. Cllr Lisa Chambers, the council's portfolio holder for waste, said: "During the autumn and winter months, we tend to see fewer visits to household waste centres. But come rain or shine, I can assure people that they are still there offering the same service as they do in the summer. "It's vitally important that we keep using the sites all year round because we're good at recycling in Suffolk."

Little lookalikes call

NEWMARKET photographers are on the hunt for Mini Mes to take part in a family look-alike competition. Little ones aged between 1 and 8 years old are invited along to the Photography Service For You studio in Sun Lane, Newmarket, to have their picture taken with the parent or grandparent they most resemble. A poster displaying the contestants' photographs will be put on show in the studio, as well as in Monkerillas in Old Station Road and Celik's Mens-room in High Street and people will be invited to vote on who they think deserves to win a prize. Voting will also be possible on the studio's Facebook page. The photo shoots will take place today, tomorrow and October 6 and 13 and winners will be announced in the studio on Saturday, October 29. For more information, call the studio on (01638) 667461.

Confusion over 'missing' buses

SIX bus services have been missed out of Newmarket's bus timetable – sparking concern that people will not know they are still running. Suffolk County Council's Newmarket and Surrounding Area Get on Board booklet was released in September detailing the bus services operating in the town and as far as Ely, Bury St Edmunds and Cambridge, but without printing the services running between Newmarket and some Cambridgeshire villages. The 203 and 204 routes serving Isleham, Fordham, Snailwell and Newmarket were missed out, as were the 901, 902, 903 and 904 services, which cater for those living in Newmarket, Ashley, Cheveley, Kirtling, Dullingham and Brinkley.

The number 47 service was also

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

printed wrongly on the timetable. The Brinkley to Newmarket bus leaving Dullingham at 6.53am is no longer running and the second bus leaves Brinkley three minutes later than published. David Holliman, 35, of Chesterton, who volunteers his time at the library to help people get around on public transport, was concerned people would think the services had ceased. He said: "It just seems silly if they want to give people information and then they are not putting a lot of it in the book." He said it was important for people to know about the services otherwise they would not use them. He said: "Cambridgeshire publish a leaflet which I give to people when they ask for it, but other than that leaflet there's no detail about it. "Cambridgeshire cannot put their leaflet or booklet in stops in Newmarket because it's in Suffolk. It's up to Suffolk to put their things in their boards." A spokesman for Suffolk County Council said: "All of these routes are Freedom Travel services. When we are notified of routes, we add them to our timetables and website. "It appears that we've not been notified of these services yet. However, now we are aware we can include them. We'd like to thank the Newmarket Weekly News for bringing this to our attention." Dylan Evans, managing director of Freedom Travel, said: "We were not aware of the error but we are glad it has been rectified."

Frankie set to get university honour

FRANKIE Dettori and TV star Richard Madeley and Sir Keith Mills will receive honorary doctorates from Anglia Ruskin University. The Stetchworth-based jockey, right, will become an Honorary Doctor of Science. Mr Madeley, of Richard and Judy fame, will get an Honorary Doctor of Letters for his contribution to television, reading, entertainment and media. Sir Keith Mills will become an Honorary Doctor of Business Administration for his services to business, sport and society.

Council looks to leave Dome

FOREST Heath District Council intends to vacate Mildenhall's Dome Leisure Centre and is considering other sites where fitness activities could be provided at a lower cost.

The council has described Mildenhall's swimming pool and leisure centre as quite old and expensive to run.

As part of its review of its leisure facilities in the town, the council is looking at its options for maintaining Mildenhall's leisure assets and services, including whether there is a case for investing in new sites and facilities if they could be operated at a lower cost.

Satellite dish vandalised

A CONNECTOR unit was broken off a satellite dish outside a house in Newmarket on Sunday. The damage to the dish attached to a home in Queen Street took place between 9am and 5pm.

Call Newmarket Police on (01284) 774100, quoting the reference NE/11/1816, if you saw anything suspicious.

Money and phone stolen

CASH, a mobile phone and a digital camera were stolen from a home in Old Station Road in Newmarket.

The offenders entered the property through an insecure ground floor window and took the money, the Nokia mobile and the Canon camera between 5.30am and 12.15pm on Saturday, September 24.

Call Suffolk Police on (01284) 774100 quoting reference NE/11/1799 if you can help.

Thieves take computers

TWO laptops were stolen from a Newmarket home on Saturday.

Offenders got into the Park Avenue property at 11.35pm through the front door, which was insecure, and made off with the two computers.

Call Suffolk Police on (01284) 774100 quoting reference NE/11/1805 if you saw anything suspicious.

Decision on homes plan hanging in the balance

Beauty boss is thinking bigger

BUSINESSES have scope to expand in Newmarket, according to a woman who is celebrating her move into bigger premises.

Pure Beauty started in Exning Road, Newmarket, in 2004 with two treatment rooms and one beauty therapist – its owner, Zoe MacDonald.

Seven years later, she is celebrating moving into a premises in Freshfields in the town with an third treatment room, another beauty therapist and a sports therapist providing sports massage on Thursdays.

The 37-year-old owner said: "I'm grateful for the support that my existing clients have shown me. So many of them turned up on Tuesday for the opening. For Newmarket, it just goes to show it is not just about shops closing – people can expand at times like this as well. I'm really proud of what I have actually achieved and now is the time to expand it and I have had really great support from my clients."

The beauty salon, which offers nail treatments, different types of massages, waxing and facials, for example, has been redecorated with red and gold wallpaper and given a new floor and ceiling.

Cllr Keith Bovill, Newmarket's mayor, helped cut the gold ribbon and a cake at the opening ceremony on Tuesday.

A DECISION on whether up to 1,200 homes can be built on land in north-east Newmarket is expected early next year.

The final week of the Hatchfield Farm planning inquiry into the controversial development proposed for the site closed on Friday.

Lord Derby's team, which wants to develop the earl's land, went head-to-head against the Tattersalls group, Save Historic Newmarket and Forest Heath District Council, which threw out the proposals earlier this year, during the four-week appeal.

The development would also involve the creation of employment space and community facilities on the site.

Just before the inquiry broke for several weeks in July, Lord Derby's team found evidence of badgers on the site and further ecological surveys were conducted.

A spokesperson for Lord Derby said: "Since the discovery of some badger setts at Hatchfield Farm, comprehensive ecological surveys have been carried out, leading to the proposal of measures to mitigate any impact of development.

"In a letter to the inquiry, the Government's advisor on nature conservation matters, Natural England, has confirmed that it is satisfied with the mitigation measures proposed and has no objection to the Hatchfield Farm development in terms of bats, badgers or other flora and fauna. The inquiry has heard the evidence on this issue and we await the inspector's deliberation."

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

He added they have been grateful for the opportunity to have their evidence scrutinised objectively and the chance to rebut "often exaggerated claims" from others.

A spokesperson for Save Historic Newmarket said they had been disappointed with the response from Natural England, but had every confidence the inspector would "see through" Lord Derby's proposals.

The spokesperson said: "Though shameful, it was no surprise that Lord Derby did not turn up to the appeal at all. However, it has been truly shocking to hear his experts make excuses for his proposals which, aside from the monumental increase in traffic, we believe will cause environmental damage to protected species including bats and badgers."

The secretary of state will now consider a report and his decision is expected in February.

CAB advice at end of phone

THE launch of a new service by the Newmarket Citizens Advice Bureau means help is now just a phonecall away.

Access for All was launched at Newmarket CAB's AGM last Friday following a £15,000 grant from the Lottery Transition Fund.

The telephone inquiry service will allow people in need to get in touch with Newmarket Citizens Advice Bureau at the first sign of trouble between 9.30am and 2.30pm on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, with the possibility of the programme being extended if demand proves high.

Speaking during the ceremony, Lynne Rawlings, manager at the bureau, said: "If I could get just one message to the public, it has to be 'contact us at the first sign of a problem'. We can't change what's happened, but we can help you stop things from getting worse."

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

She said the bureau has registered about 2,500 new clients in the last year, and a similar number the year before, but the issues people are bringing to the service are becoming more complex.

Employment problems have repercussions in terms of money, health and housing, while changes to the benefit system have sometimes resulted in people having money withdrawn from them immediately, she said.

She added housing and relationship enquiries have almost doubled and both employment problems and benefit enquiries have risen by half.

Speaking before the launch, she said: "With cuts in public transport and high petrol costs, we know it's difficult for people to get to the bureau – that's why we are extending our phone service to make it more available.

"People will be able to get quicker, free confidential advice wherever they are."

She said debt problems are best dealt with as they arise and while some debt management firms can charge up to £2,000 for their services, CAB will offer a helping hand for free.

She said: "It's possible, of course, that clients may still need to come into the bureau for further support."

"But it's that initial call that's so important and that's where our new service will be of great help."

The bureau is looking for volunteers to become gateway advisors who will receive full training, as well as two people interested in social policy to report to the national organisation.

To volunteer or for the Access for All service, call the bureau on 01638 665999.

All's not wool for volunteers

THE knitting ladies at the Forest Heath Volunteer Centre are in a bit of a knot and urgently need more wool.

The ladies give up their time to create beautiful items which are given out to local charities.

Any spare wool you have can be handed into the office at 147 All Saint's Road.

Teaming up for tourism guide

A NEW tourism guide could boost the number of people across the country coming to Suffolk for their holidays.

Some 70,000 copies of the magazine-style brochure, which will include information on areas including Newmarket and Bury St Edmunds, will be distributed around the country in December.

Four councils, including Forest Heath, have clubbed together to produce the Suffolk Town and Country Holiday Guide because Choose Suffolk, the main promotional body for the county, is folding.

Derelict property gets studio revamp

A NEW photography studio is blossoming in a formerly derelict property struck by a 4x4 several years ago.

The Million Dollar Faces Photography Studio, in Oxford Street, Exning, opened at the end of August following weeks of work by Charlotte Potter, 25, who is the photographer, her husband, Daniel, 30, who co-owns the business, and others.

She said: "We have now completely done it up, which took around four weeks of hard graft and a lot of help from family, friends and fantastic businesses in the local area."

Mrs Potter said the inside of the building was lovely but the place had needed a lot of work. She said: "It was a complete mess – there was no ceiling, we had to build walls because a car went through the front of it."

She said things were going well, adding she had so far photographed customers from as far away as Corby, St Ives, St Neots and Cambourne.

She said: "We recently had a mum from Cambourne who came; she loved her pictures and I am now inundated with all the Cambourne yummy mummies and their gorgeous babies."

For more information on the studio, which snaps everything from weddings to mums-to-be, call Mrs Potter on 07517 357570 or visit www.milliondollarfaces.co.uk.

Fat-busting help on offer at centre

TAKE advantage of the offer of a free body fat analysis at the launch of a fat loss and wellness clinic in Newmarket on Saturday – if you dare.

Cllr Keith Bovill, Newmarket's mayor, will officially open the clinic at Newmarket Leisure Centre, which will offer dietary advice and treatments to people in the area to help them control their weight.

The launch follows the finding in the Suffolk Health Strategy that almost a third of people in Forest Heath are technically obese, seven per cent above the national average.

Lifetime Nutrition's weekly clinic will be held on Thursdays and will give customers a nutritional health consultation including an analysis of their body fat composition and then set them a 12-week weight management programme.

The clinic will teach clients about diet and will feature recipes and cooking challenges and will educate people about subjects including digestive function and the importance of regular sleep patterns.

Amanda Locke, manager at Lifetime Nutrition, said: "The purpose of the fat loss and wellness clinic is to reduce obesity by educating people around food and the impact it has on their health. Just a 10 per cent reduction in weight will have a profound impact on obesity related illness and self-esteem. Superbly located in the Newmarket Leisure Centre, giving clients a complete health programme, diet and exercise, this is truly an exciting and unique service to the area."

People are invited to the clinic's opening day between 10am and 4pm for free advice on weight loss. It will be offering free body fat analyses and health supplements and a goody bag will be given to those who book consultations on the day.

For more information, call Ms Locke on 07502 316594 or visit www.lifetime-nutrition.co.uk.

Regeneration group issues rallying cry to retailers to help banish shabby shopping

High Street needs YOU!

A LETTER will be handed to High Street traders urging everyone to roll up their sleeves and play their part in restoring pride in Newmarket.

The High Street Regeneration Committee, which was formed by Newmarket Town Council following its recognition that the road is looking untidy in some places, has drafted the letter which will be handed out to managers and shop owners in the main street.

Surveys of High Street have so far been carried out by members of the group at different times of day, highlighting issues the group hopes to address such as improving the town's pretty displays of flowers, redundant signs, shabby and mismatched litter bins and benches, as well as posters and paper notices littering lampposts.

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

But the committee has appealed to Newmarket retailers to throw their weight behind the campaign and help make a real difference to the town's High Street.

The letter notes Newmarket has been the target of criticism from local and national quarters in recent weeks and the time has come to address it head-on.

It reads: "The street surface looks dirty and some shop, restaurant and business fronts could do with a serious wash and brush up.

"We want to encourage you, our shopkeepers, to keep your business frontages clean and undertake any basic maintenance you can, so the image you present to shoppers, residents and visitors is one we can all be proud of.

"It may only be start but it would be a great start and the springboard for lots of other initiatives we hope will give our town the shot in arm it needs in these difficult economic times.

"And if we start getting our High Street talked about for all the right reasons that can only help you, as hard-working traders, get the success you deserve."

Before the next meeting on Thursday, October 6, members of the committee will look into issues including several A-boards around the town that should not be there and the location of benches.

Move could mean far fewer district councillors

Sir, one trusts that Laurie Offord ('I don't care what my address is', Weekly News, September 22) realises that Cllr Tom Kerby's proposal that Newmarket should become a part of East Cambridgeshire rather than Forest Heath District and Suffolk County is not merely about a change of address but involves local government representation and administration.

East Cambridgeshire has 39 district councillors for an electorate of just over 120,000. Forest Heath has 27 district councillors for an electorate of just over 40,000. The Newmarket and Exning Wards have nine district councillors for an electorate around 13,000.

Were Newmarket and Exning to be moved into ECDC, can one suppose that we would retain nine councillors or would that number be reduced to four, ie less than 10 per cent of 43 councillors? Currently, Newmarket and Exning have nine of 27 Forest Heath councillors.

Might it not be better if ECDC's Wards of Cheveley, Dullingham, Fordham, the Swaffhams, Bottisham and Burwell became part of Forest Heath? This would give FHDC an electorate of around 60,000.

The villages' 11 district councillors could join FHDC's 27. ECDC, thus reduced to 28 councillors, could usefully increase the number of councillors in some wards to give better representation to the remaining 100,000 voters. Including the villages in Forest Heath would avoid Geoffrey Woollard's irritation at having to drive through West Suffolk while canvassing for East Cambridgeshire ('Plan for new constituency makes sense', Weekly News, September 22) and would also reduce his travel expenses and carbon footprint.

I believe, also, that some East Cambridgeshire voters might prefer to revert to being The Isle of Ely, divorced from Cambridge and even Cambridgeshire.

No one seems to know how many Newmarket and Exning residents have signed Cllr Kerby's petition, but thus far his online petition has 13 signatories.

As a sign of good faith I wonder if Cllr Kerby might consider securing a pledge from his county council to match the £1m which Suffolk is putting towards the proposed Home of Horseracing Centre and a further pledge from ECDC to match Forest Heath's contribution? Of course, sometime in the possibly near future Tom Kerby may be able to stand for election to FHDC for the Cheveley Ward.

His energy, enthusiasm and lateral thinking could be quite refreshing.

Your say online

STORY: High Street win for betting firm, Weekly News, September 22

What a shame that it has been agreed to have yet another betting shop in Newmarket. It was not long ago that Simon Morris of Morris & Armitage lost his fight to move his established and successful estate agents in to a property he owned on the High Street due to the fact the retail premises were being outnumbered by the likes of betting shops etc. I know which one of the two I would prefer to have seen on the High Street. I believe this mass of betting shops gives off the wrong impression to young people and visitors to Newmarket too. Shame on whoever agreed this.

End of a heroic effort

FIVE months of fundraising for Help for Heroes culminated with a last hurrah and a big thank-you in Burwell.

Victoria Chalklin, 29, and her boyfriend, Lee Chamberlain, 38, rattled their collection buckets for the last time last Friday night at the 12th event they have staged or helped organise in aid of the charity since May.

She said: "We were inspired to begin fundraising for Help for Heroes after my brother was posted to Afghanistan in April. James is 22 and firefighter in the RAF. At this time, the danger and uncertainty of such a war zone was brought into reality.

"We felt that any ounce of help and support we could give to those servicemen returning from such a place in need of help would be valuable to them and make us feel as though we were doing our part."

They arranged the finale event at the Burwell Ex-Service and Social Club to celebrate the feat and thank those who had helped them raise more than £6,500.

She said: "With the money donated on the night in addition to that raised over the past few months we have collected an amazing amount of £6,840."

The hard-working couple, who have also been encouraging businesses to sign up the Heroes Welcome Scheme in the area, have decided to take a breather from fundraising for the moment, but have not ruled out a comeback at a later date.

Break-in bid – suspect hunted

POLICE are hunting a slim white man following two break-ins in Newmarket High Street on Saturday.

A side door of Thing Me Bobs in Newmarket High Street was forced open at 10.05pm, activating the alarm.

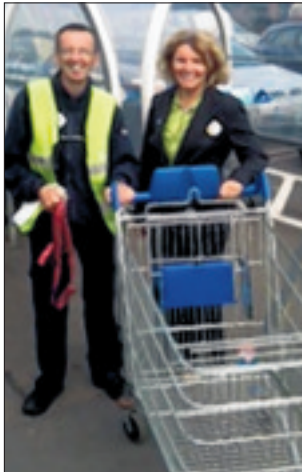

Nothing was stolen but a slim white man in dark clothing who was about 30 years old and 5ft 10in was seen running from the shop.

Raiders also forced the rear door of another shop in High Street at 8.40pm, setting off the alarm.

It is unclear whether anything was taken.

Anyone with information which could help Suffolk Police should phone (01284) 774100 quoting the reference NE/11/1804.

Dumped trolley? Ring the hotline!

We'll get it: Fordham Road Tesco services manager Diane Mallett and customer assistant Peter Evans launch the trolley retrieval hotline.

CP

CONCERNED residents can now report abandoned trolleys to a Newmarket supermarket on a special hotline.

The telephone number has been launched by the Tesco store in Fordham Road in response to the fears that the stolen trolley problem has been getting out of hand.

Steve Lewis, manager of the store, said: "We'd had complaints from our customers and from people living nearby that they were fed up with seeing abandoned trolleys in the area. So we gathered a team of volunteers to go and collect them.

"Some of the trolleys were submerged in water or stuck in hedges, so it wasn't an easy job. But we're pleased that we've found most of them. The trolleys we've been unable to reach will be retrieved by a dedicated maintenance team in the next few weeks."

Members of staff from the store tracked their trolleys as far as the Yellow Brick Road near the number one drain and have already retrieved seven, and are working on reclaiming the remaining trolleys.

They also organised a clean-up of litter around the store, a move the staff have promised will be repeated on a regular basis throughout the year.

Anyone who spots an abandoned trolley can ring the hotline on (01638) 686407 between 8am and 10pm and the store will collect them.

The store will have to respond to reports within 24 hours following the approval on Monday night by the town council of proposals to hand supermarkets a £50 invoice if they fail to remove a dumped trolley within a day and a night of its presence being reported to them.

The scheme is set to come into effect in the coming weeks.

Managers of the Fordham Road store are also looking into measures to prevent their trolleys from being wheeled off their premises in the first place.

One idea under consideration is the introduction of wheel locks which will activate when a trolley is pushed off the store's site; another proposal would see coin slots installed on each trolley to encourage people to return it to retrieve their money.

Students on the air

YOUNG voices from Newmarket College will be heard on BBC Radio One next month. Five girls from the Exning Road college – Jenny Offley, Jess Anderson, Jess Keen, Cheyenne Wilson and Ellen Nice – were interviewed for more than an hour last Thursday for a programme about the lives of teenagers which will be broadcast on the first two Mondays of October. The Newmarket students spoke about a range of subjects, but they talked in particular about their expedition to Kenya next summer where they will spend a month teaching in a village school and taking part in conservation work. They also hope to climb Mount Kenya during their stay.

Appeal after Ford stolen

A BEIGE Ford Escape was stolen from Downing Close in Mildenhall. The theft of the vehicle, registration AEO9 CVN, took place between 1pm on Sunday, September 18, and 6.50am the following day. Anyone with information should call Mildenhall Police on (01284) 774100, quoting the reference MH/11/2055.

Thieves raid flat

CASH, jewellery, hand tools and documents have been stolen from a Newmarket flat. Thieves entered a block of flats in Tattersall Crescent between 10.15am and 6pm on Tuesday, September 20, through an insecure communal door and managed to get into one of the properties. Call Suffolk Police on (01284) 774100, quoting reference NE/11/1779, if you saw anything suspicious.

Shed and garage burn

FLAMES destroyed a shed and spread to a garage last Thursday. Firefighters were called to Churchill Avenue, Newmarket, shortly after 3.15pm, and found the shed was completely razed and that the detached garage was "well alight".

Sports day marks 30th anniversary

RAF Mildenhall hosted a sports day for members of the community with disabilities for the 30th time on Saturday.

The Joan Mann Special Sports Day took place in Hangar 711 on the base and saw more than 800 volunteers from RAF Mildenhall lay on games, entertainment and food for more than 250 guests.

The day kicked off with an Olympic-style parade of the athletes, who proceeded to get stuck in to sports including basketball, frisbee toss, bowling and an obstacle course and wheelchair slalom. The day's events were rounded off with an awards ceremony.

Master Sgt Gary Kimes, 351st air refueling squadron first sergeant and chairman of this year's event, said: "Joan Mann Special Sports day is significant because it allows us to team with our host nation to provide a day of celebration for both countries' special athletes. "This year marks the 30th anniversary and our committee has worked hard to make it a memorable event for everyone."

The sports day draws its name from its founder, an employee of the Ministry of Defence who worked at the public affairs office on the airbase.

Sentence cut for organ pipes thief

THE prison sentence of a Newmarket man who stole organ pipes from a church has been reduced by a crown court judge.

Tobias Stevens, 22, was spotted making off with seven pipes from inside St John's Church, Bury St Edmunds, on April 14 which he sold for scrap and whose replacement cost £1,368.

He was handed a 16-week suspended prison sentence by West Suffolk magistrates and walked free from court – but resumed offending just five days later with the theft of sunglasses worth £41 from TK Maxx in Newmarket.

The suspended sentence was activated as a result, in addition to another 28 days for breaching the order.

Stevens, until recently of Howard De Walden Way, Newmarket, and who is

BY COURT REPORTER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

now staying in Lowestoft, appeared at Ipswich Crown Court to appeal against the length of the sentence.

He also asked the court to take into account an offence of theft of perfume worth £104 from Boots in Lowestoft on August 29.

Matthew Gowan, appearing for Stevens, said magistrates had not been in possession of a detailed report from the Probation Service about the defendant's personal circumstances when he was sentenced for the church theft.

He said while Stevens had a "horrendous" list of previous offences including 41 thefts, he had now made genuine efforts to tackle his problems and address his drug use.

If magistrates had been fully aware of all the circumstances, Mr Gowan said, it was unlikely such a long prison sentence would have been imposed.

While being held in HMP Norwich, Stevens had been taking instruction from the prison chaplain who had written on Stevens's behalf to St John's Church in Bury St Edmunds to apologise for the theft of the organ pipes.

Judge Peter Fenn, sitting with two magistrates, upheld Stevens appeal and reduced the sentence for the theft of the organ pipes to 10 weeks with a further four weeks to be served for breaching the suspended sentence order.

Stevens was sentenced to six weeks imprisonment for the TK Maxx theft, to run concurrently with the other part of his sentence.

Police plea after 70 drivers are caught not wearing seatbelts in just one week

ALMOST 70 motorists were caught without their seatbelts on Suffolk's roads in just one week.

The countywide campaign to crackdown on people not wearing seatbelts or using appropriate child restraints was carried out between Monday, September 12 and Sunday, September 18.

A total of 66 fixed penalty notices were issued to adults not wearing a seatbelt during the campaign, which was led by Tispol, the European Traffic Police Network, and saw the recipients handed a fine of at least £60.

A similar campaign in February saw 186 fixed penalty notices handed out, while a crackdown last September saw 102 motorists given a notice.

Insp Bruce Gent, of the roads policing unit, said: "The majority of car users are responsible people and listen to advice.

"Although fewer people were caught not wearing a seatbelt in relation to previous campaigns, 9.4 fixed penalty notices issued every day is still too many, especially when you consider what a simple, yet vital thing it is to put on your seatbelt.

"Even on short journeys or at low speeds a seatbelt must be worn. It can mean the difference between life and death or serious life-changing injury.

"It is especially important that infants and young children have the correct child restraints and the driver is responsible for this.

"We will continue to target people who do not wear seatbelts or fail to use appropriate restraints for infants and young children. Furthermore, we are very willing to give advice on child restraints where needed."

Suffolk Police warned the lack of a seatbelts remains one of the main factors causing serious injury or death in collisions.

Motorists involved in crashes while travelling at 30mph will be thrown forward with a force of between 30 and 60 times their body weight, which is reduced by wearing a seatbelt.

A quiet rural life for transgender ex-council couple

Picture: 771337.

CAMBRIDGE'S first transgender mayor and mayoress have tied the knot – and are now enjoying a quiet rural life near Newmarket.

Former city councillors Jenny Bailey and her partner Jennifer Liddle, both of whom were born as boys but went through gender reassignment later in life, made history when Ms Bailey was chosen as first citizen of the city in 2007.

Ms Liddle served as her consort during her year of office, after which Ms Bailey stepped down as a councillor – and now they've finally found time to enter into a civil partnership.

When Ms Bailey stepped down in 2008, the couple moved out of the city to Woodditton, where they work designing technology for radio systems.

Last week the couple went to Shire Hall register office in Cambridge to set the official seal on their relationship by forming a civil partnership.

The Civil Partnership Act, which became law in 2004, gives same-sex couples rights and responsibilities identical to civil marriage.

Ms Bailey said: "We've been together since 1994, so that's 17 years now, almost two decades. Civil partnerships didn't exist when we first got together.

"When they did come into existence, we were too busy running our own company and doing council work, both of which kept us both very busy while we were in Cambridge.

"Since we moved out of Cambridge into the wilds of East Cambridgeshire two years ago, we've been busy with learning how to grow vegetables, how to keep chickens. We've done a bee-keeping course, have our first hive, built an office and erected a poly tunnel.

"Life has just about calmed down enough that we now have time to get married. It's just one of those things we've been meaning to do for years but have only just found time for."

The ceremony at Shire Hall took just a few minutes and was attended by two witnesses who threw confetti over the happy couple.

Antoinette Jackson, chief executive of the city council, said: "Jenny and Jennifer had a great year when they were mayor and mayoress, and we'd like to wish them all the best on their happy day."

'Early-onset Alzheimer's hit my wonderful man at 43'

Not long married, Sarah King and her husband were looking forward to a happy family life together. But within a few short years, Andrew was unable to walk, talk or feed himself. In a heartbreaking interview with Alice Ryan, Sarah tells how early-onset Alzheimer's stole Andrew away from her at a devastatingly young age – and how proud she is that, despite everything, he still hasn't given up on life.

Love story: top right, Andrew and Sarah at their "fairytale white wedding" at Linton Village Church and, inset, as the couple are today.

TURN the clock back 10 years and Andrew King was living an almost charmed life. A scientist by profession, he had a great job. He was close to his family and had a huge network of friends. And he'd not long married Sarah, the wife he adored; the couple were trying for a family of their own.

Then, out of the blue, everything changed. Andrew became depressed. He stopped coping at work: forced to quit his career as a scientist, he took a job stacking supermarket shelves. He kept getting speeding fines and pranging the car; eventually, he wrote it off altogether.

Though neither he nor Sarah knew it, Andrew was showing the signs of early-onset Alzheimer's. Officially diagnosed five years ago, aged just 43, the decline in his health was swift and sharp: now 48, Andrew is in full-time care. Unable to walk, talk or feed himself, he's doubly incontinent and can barely move.

"The carers think he still recognises me – apparently he looks round when he hears my voice – but I'm not sure whether he knows me or not," admits Sarah. "To be honest, Andrew's quite literally like a big baby."

"When he was diagnosed, we were told he had five to eight years; the five years are already up. Part of me wants him to live forever, and part of me wants it all over with."

"I'm quite scared of what life is going to be like without him: at the moment, my life is structured round him. And then there's the being a widow thing... At the moment, no matter how hard things are, I've still got a husband."

"It might sound strange, but I'm very proud of Andrew. I'm proud of the fact he's still hanging in there: he hasn't given up. And he's stayed true to the man he was. He was such a lovely, gentle person – and he's still lovely and gentle now."

Sarah, who lives in Linton, said: "I want people to know that Alzheimer's affects young people, as well as old. And I want them to realise that it doesn't just affect individuals, it affects whole families."

Sarah and Andrew met in 1997. She had moved to Cambridge from her native Devon to work for the Ministry of Defence in Waterbeach. Joining the local branch of the Intervarsity Club, she met Andrew at a social event; despite thinking he was 'a real scruff bag', there was an instant attraction.

"I developed a bit of a crush on him," laughs Sarah. "He came back to mine for coffee one night and we ended up talking about what we were looking for in an ideal partner. We agreed it was a friend who made us laugh."

"After that night, I sent him a silly note. Then I felt a bit embarrassed and was quite prepared to forget all about it."

"But Andrew called me up and said 'Shall we go for a drink and sort this thing out?'... Six weeks later we were talking about getting engaged."

The couple went on their first date in the April, got engaged in the July, and by August had moved in together. A fairytale white wedding – at Linton Village Church, then Chilford Hall – soon followed.

"It all happened quite quickly, yet it felt so natural. I can remember asking one of my friends, when she got married, how she knew her husband was The One. She said 'You just know' – and that's so true. I just knew."

"Andrew had a great sense of humour, a lovely big smile... He was straightforward, honest and kind. He was just such a nice man."

A year after their marriage, the couple started trying for a baby, but with no success. After having numerous tests, they opted for fertility treatment; undergoing a type of IVF known as ICSI (intracytoplasmic sperm injection), they agreed to have three rounds, stopping when Sarah hit 40.

"Up until I met Andrew I was never bothered about getting married and having children. But meeting him changed all that."

The first attempt at IVF failed. And then the treatment was put on hold – because Andrew's health had already begun to deteriorate.

"To start with, we thought he was depressed. His granddad died, and he was very close to his granddad. Then he lost his own father."

"Things were getting harder for him at work. And his driving went a bit funny: there were a lot of wing mirrors being clipped and he got speeding fine after speeding fine – he got three in a row on the Elizabeth Way bridge in Cambridge."

"At the time I remember thinking 'If you really loved me, you wouldn't be doing these things.'"

Unable to hold down his high-flying job as a geneticist, Andrew took a job stacking shelves in a supermarket instead. But even that proved too much: the very day he was diagnosed with dementia, bosses called him into an emergency meeting – and said his work was simply not up to scratch, he either had to resign or be sacked.

Having been such a capable man, Sarah says Andrew found losing control over his life, his mind and body very tough at times. "In the end he wrote off the car, so I did all the driving. We'd be going along and he was happy as Larry one minute; the next I'd look round and he was in tears."

It was a letter from Andrew's mum that ultimately led to the dementia diagnosis. "We went to a family party and he was limping quite badly – the limp was, it turned out, another symptom; a sign that the signals from his brain just weren't working. She wrote us a letter saying she could see so many worrying changes in him."

Subsequently referred to the memory clinic at Addenbrooke's, Andrew underwent a wide range of tests. In September 2006, doctors said he was suffering from a form of dementia; in November, they confirmed it was early-onset Alzheimer's disease.

The most common form of dementia, Alzheimer's is an incurable, degenerative and, ultimately, terminal condition. Caused by so-called 'plaques' and 'tangles' in the brain – damaged neurons, which lead to the death of brain cells – it results in a raft of symptoms: confusion, memory loss, mood swings, impaired language skills and, eventually, the breakdown of basic bodily functions.

The diagnosis was, says Sarah, a horrible shock. Dealing with her husband's rapid decline was a challenge, both emotionally and in practical terms. "I was working in London then. Andrew became doubly incontinent and I'd come home at night to find he hadn't made it to the toilet in time; messes all over the place."

"His behaviour wasn't always easy. He'd do the most frustrating things. I clearly remember, just before he was diagnosed, yelling at him right in the middle of Saffron Walden. I have no idea what had happened; now I look back and wish like anything I hadn't yelled..."

"It got to the stage where I couldn't go anywhere, even into the next room, without him following me. And I realised that I couldn't cope anymore."

Sarah made the decision for Andrew to go into full-time care. "Leaving him was so hard. It felt like I was leaving a part of myself behind. It took I don't know how many visits – months and months – for me to be able to drive off without having a little cry in the car."

Within two years of his diagnosis, Andrew couldn't walk or feed himself unaided and struggled to speak. Then, two and a half years ago, he stopped being able to eat at all; because of his young age, doctors agreed to fit a feeding tube. "If it wasn't for the tube, he wouldn't be here now," Sarah explains.

Sarah visits Andrew several times a week, every week, despite his care home being in March – an hour's drive away. It is, she admits, hard to see him as he is now: a shell of the man he used to be. The impact of Andrew's illness has been enormous not only for her, but for his whole family – especially his mother and siblings.

As a result of their abandoned IVF treatment, Sarah and Andrew still had two viable embryos on hold. "Andrew always said I should do what I wanted, but I didn't want to go ahead and try to get pregnant without him; I never wanted to be a parent on my own. So the embryos were donated to stem cell research."

"The fact I won't ever have children is beginning to feel more real now, not least because I'm about to be 44. I know I'm going to be a widow without any children. I'll never get to see our children grow up, leave school, get married and become a grandmother."

"For a long time, it's felt like my life has been on pause. I couldn't bring myself to sort out his clothes, or clear out any of his things. Now I am trying to plan things – go on holiday, go out with friends – and make another life for myself."

"I wouldn't wish this on anybody, yet I wouldn't wish for a life without Andrew in it. Nothing changes the fact I'm still very proud to say this wonderful man is my husband."

For something to keep the whole family happy, visit Jumpin Jacks in Mildenhall.

The playhouse opened in October 2010, when friends Dina Strickland and Carla Mitchell were tired of driving their children miles away for a fun day out.

Dina says: "There was nothing in the area for children to do, and when we started researching we found there was a need for it."

There is a fantastic three-tier purpose-built play frame with a four-lane astra slide and a designated area for softplay for the under threes, not to mention a tempting café for adults or kids in need of a refuel, and two party rooms (jungle huts) available for hire.

Jumpin Jacks has activities for children from babies to 12-year-olds, and there are plenty of new classes and special events available this autumn.

Children aged seven and above will love the Laser Club, held every Tuesday and Thursday from 5.45pm-7pm, and 7pm-8.15pm. With the £10 fee including a hot dog and refreshments, as well as prizes for winners, it's a great way to get them burning off some energy.

not try a peaceful yoga session, for babies aged 15 months to three years. Held every Friday at 11am, the £4.50 fee includes free play at Jumpin Jacks.

The playhouse is open on Monday and Wednesday from 10am-6pm, when a special half-price admission is available after school with a new teatime menu, Tuesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday 10am-5pm and Sunday 10am-4pm. It costs £4 Monday-Friday and £4.50 on weekends and holidays.

Story behind horse project

HORSE About Newmarket souvenir brochures are now on sale around town.

The 40-page booklet tells the story of the project from the launch of the competition to find artists to paint the 13 life-sized horses at the start of the year to how to bid for a horse at the auction in October.

Each artist is introduced and explains what inspired their creations and the brochure includes photos of the little horses painted by Newmarket schools and youth organisations as well as information about the two charities set to benefit from the sale of the horses, Racing Welfare and St Nicholas Hospice.

Myths, such as the rumour that the picture of singer Amy Winehouse on Cockney Rebel had a heart tattoo added to her shoulder following her death, are debunked and comments made about the horses by members of the public are aired. One little girl called Prudence, 4, said: "I like the little horses because they're my size."

The brochures, which were produced by Joanne Rogers and Forest Heath District Council and designed by Rachel Wood, cost £2 and are available from the National Horseracing Museum, Tindalls, the town council offices, Corney and Barrow Wine Merchants, the Sun Lane Craft Gallery and the Tourist Information Offices.

Pipped at the post! Huge bid for Dancing Brave is too late

BY JENNIE BAKER

Email: editorial@newmarketweeklynews.co.uk

A NEW bidder willing to pay £1,200 for a miniature painted horse arrived half an hour too late – and Dancing Brave was sold for £660.

Councillors, council staff, artists and others gathered in the Sun Lane Craft Gallery, where the horse has stood for the summer, awaiting the end of the auction last Wednesday, the 73rd birthday of the artist who painted it, Mavis Pope.

She said: "He came and we said 'we are sorry but you are too late' and he was quite upset."

But she now plans to create another for him on the Wild West theme, with the proceeds going to Racing Welfare.

She said despite initial reservations about taking part in the project, she had really enjoyed it. She said: "I never wanted to do it in the first place. I was converted by (mayor) Keith Bovill and afterwards I thought he was right, I was wrong."

Farewell: from left, Isabelle Barrett, Keith Bovill, Regina Raycheva, Mavis Pope, Frances Wray, Joy Uney and Kay Dawson with Dancing Brave, who was sold for £660.

Cllr Joy Uney, who had the idea for the community art project, had baked a cake for the occasion, decorated with

Mavis's name and braves dancing around a camp fire – a similar scene to the one painted on the flank of the small horse, who was named after the 1986 2,000 Guineas winner.

She said: "I have met such wonderful people along the way who are friends. I hope it has worked the same for everybody else."

Two charities will receive 80 per cent of the proceeds of the sale. Twenty per cent would have been given to the painter, but at Mavis's request, half of that sum will go to Regina Raycheva, owner of the gallery.

Isabelle Barrett, the town clerk, said: "She is new to the town; she had only recently opened here and she has fully embraced the community by helping us with the project by having Dancing Brave in her shop."

Cllr Bovill said: "On behalf of the two charities, St Nicholas Hospice and Racing Welfare, we would like to thank Nigel Clark for his generous bid and wish him all the best with his new horse, Dancing Brave."

The town's 13 life-size painted horses will be put to a silent auction at Tattersalls for the 10 days to October 14.

Small horses which have not been bought by their creators will also be auctioned for the charities.

Bright future on the cards for MP

TORY backbencher Matthew Hancock is tipped to go far – by a special edition of the Top Trumps game.

The West Suffolk MP is the only Parliamentarian from the region to feature in the cards launched by Sky News to coincide with the main political parties' conference season.

He gets a nine out of 10 for career potential, beaten only by Prime Minister David Cameron, and level with Chancellor George Osborne.

Mr Hancock used to be Mr

Osborne's chief of staff and is described as "a cerebral member of the Notting Hill set" on the card.

He gets six out of 20 for "gaffability", and a 50 per cent score for "fanciability".

Other scores are the number of Twitter followers – 1,395, in Mr Hancock's case – and the number of debates attended this session – 72.

Praised as "earnest and clever", Mr Hancock's card adds: "His casual attire includes some rather interesting jumpers and he once worked as a horse catcher at Aintree."

Adam Boulton, Sky News' political editor, said: "As ever this was a tough decision process, especially because we've aimed to look ahead to the new generation of MPs making their mark on the political landscape."

"It's been a difficult year for some of our most senior politicians, and many who last year were seen as Top Trumps institutions, have failed to make the grade."

Tipped for the top: MP Matthew Hancock.

High praise for primary

A NEWMARKET primary school has been branded outstanding by a body which promotes and resources Christian religious education.

All Saints' Primary School underwent the inspection in July. It found the school was outstanding in terms of its distinctiveness and effectiveness as a Church of England School, the effectiveness of its religious education and the effectiveness of the leadership and management of the school as a church school.

The National Society for Promoting Religious Education also found the 139-pupil primary was outstanding at meeting the needs of all its students through its Christian character and in the impact of collective worship.

Headteacher Jane Eccleston said: "Staff and governors of the school are all very proud of this report, especially as it confirms the outstanding judgements in our recent Ofsted report. The inspectors recognise how strongly we include and focus on each member of our school community and the powerful impact school life at All Saints' has on developing the whole child."

The Statutory Inspection of Anglican Schools report praised the leadership of the headteacher and religious education coordinator in promoting a Christian ethos in the school as well as the Christian commitment of the staff. It added the children take pleasure in the religious activities which take place at the Vicarage Road school.

It said RE makes an "excellent contribution" to the students' moral and spiritual development and that the school was characterised by close teamwork.

The inspector wrote: "Children happily undertake responsibilities and care for each other, for example as road safety officers and helping in the pre-school."

Development of the year five and six RE curriculum, including the teaching of other faiths and forging cross-curricular links, was noted as a focus for development.

The report said Judaism is already covered and said other religions will be taught to older students. It noted the school is going to extend its RE provision and worship policy to challenge the children as old as 11 it will be taking on in September when Suffolk loses its tier of middle schools.

Sports take centre stage

SOME 850 young people kicked, peddled and jogged their way around the Newmarket Sports and Clubs Fair.

Boxing, tennis and badminton clubs were just some of the societies which attended the event at Newmarket College and Newmarket Leisure Centre, whose objective was to get more youngsters involved in local sports groups.

Ian Jackson, of the Forest Heath School Sports Partnership, which organised the event with the venues and Sport Newmarket, said most of the displays laid on by the 17 clubs and societies allowed the visitors to have a go themselves.

He said: "That, of course, made it a little bit more real for them. All in all it was very good, but we are always looking for ways in which we can improve."

Next year, he said, they were considering involving clubs like the Scouts and Girl Guides.

using coconut, a hint of ghee, lychee, pineapple and mango to create a delicious flavour.

For a dish which is truly unique to Haldy, try eddoes with chicken, lamb, duck or king prawn. This comprises of tandoori barbecued meat or prawns, cooked with eddoes, an Indian root vegetable, medium spiced with a touch of balti sauce.

There are of course numerous classic dishes on offer too, from kormas and tikka massalas, to madras and bhunas, with traditional sides such as naan bread and rice.

If you're feeling comfy snuggled up on the sofa, and don't fancy heading out in the rain, use Haldy's takeaway service, which offers free local delivery on orders of more than £20. There is also a fantastic buy one get one free offer currently available on takeaway main meals.

Alternatively visit the lively restaurant for a 25 per cent discount on all food from Sunday to Thursday, and you might just see one of the area's famous jockeys.

Haldy: Park Lane diner is open every day with intriguing menu available.

Real Haldy fans can buy membership, for £39 per year, allowing them 20 per cent off their total bills (including drinks).

Book now for your Christmas parties, as Haldy's is sure to prove popular.

The restaurant is open every day, from midday-2pm and 5.30pm-11pm.

Rugby club in hunt for home

NEWMARKET Rugby Club is on the hunt for a new home – but time is running out.

Scalback Middle School, the club's current base, is closing its doors next July and the lease on the site expires in 2018.

Neil Richardson, chairman of the club, said: "It would be a great shame to lose what is a vibrant sporting club, but we could not exist without a ground."

He said the situation was by no means dire yet, but they have to have achieved a lot by 2018.

Mr Richardson said: "Even if you identify a piece of ground, getting the planning permission through can easily take 18 months to two years, we also have fundraising to do and build the thing – so while it still seems a long way off, I became chairman four years ago and 2012 seemed a long way off then."

The club has three adult teams and a junior team in every age group from team from under-sevens through to under-18s, as well as two girls' teams, and it is still growing.

Mr Richardson said the club has outgrown its Scalback home, but could stay there if more land became available.

To meet the club's requirements, any new permanent home needs at least three full-size pitches, a floodlit training area, a clubhouse with six changing rooms able to accommodate 22 adults, an equipment store and car parking, the cost of which, he said, would run into a seven figures.

But without a firm plan to take to potential donors, fundraising is hard work. He said: "It's very difficult to be raising finance now when we can't actually tell people where we are going to go and what we are going to do; it's a bit of a catch-22."

The club could look for a home outside Newmarket but, Mr Richardson said he thought a move outside the town would have a "tremendously adverse" impact on junior rugby as many of its young members walk to and from training sessions.

He added: "To maintain the club in its current form and continue to offer the adults and children of Newmarket an opportunity to play rugby a new facility is vital."

Reunion date for pupils of former village school

A REUNION is being planned for the former pupils of a school which closed its doors in 1961.

Anyone who attended St Mary's School in Burwell is invited to the event with their partners at the Gardiner Memorial Hall on Wednesday, October 19.

The event, which includes an afternoon tea, costs £10 and will take place between 1.30pm and 4.30pm.

We are listening

As Leader of Suffolk County Council
I want to hear from you.

Before we make the really important spending decisions that will affect all of us across the county, I believe it's vital we take time to listen to you: the people who live and work in Suffolk.

We will also be engaging with businesses, MPs, other local councils and voluntary organisations as part of our budget-setting process.

As councillors, we have some very difficult decisions to make. We have to save £50m over the next two years. To do that we will need to change the way we work.

I am determined that we do all we can to protect our valued front-line services. This will mean that, as far as possible, savings must come from cuts in bureaucracy, back-office functions and by redesigning the way these services are provided.

As we make these decisions, it is important for me to know what you as council tax-payers think about the services we provide, and which areas you think are most important.

We have designed this consultation to be as simple and straightforward as possible to make it easy for you to give us your views.

There are a number of ways to get involved. You can:

- Visit our website www.suffolk.gov.uk/WeAreListening
- Fill in a paper copy of our survey (available in libraries) and return it using the freepost address
- Ring our dedicated phone line 0845 603 1842
- Talk to your local councillor - you can find out who this is at www.writetothem.com

By working together, we can achieve the best for Suffolk and I would encourage you to take part in the consultation.

This is your chance to have your say about the decisions that affect you.

I look forward to hearing from you.

Yours sincerely

Cllr Mark Bee
Leader of Suffolk County Council

A stylish garden made easier

Home and Garden: Free delivery within a 40-mile radius.

ADVERTISEMENT FEATURE

FOR a stylish garden, at a fraction of the price, visit local firm Home and Garden.

The family-run business has been running for more than 30 years, and deals in a wide range of cane furniture and garden ornaments, which are normally sent out to trade stockists across the country.

Visitors to the factory's showroom, however, are allowed to pick up items for themselves, such as three piece suites, linen baskets and storage units, for fantastic prices.

The firm can also offer free local delivery within a 40 mile radius, as well as supplying traders across the country.

Family firm: Showroom is a must-visit.

The company decided to develop a showroom at the factory for local residents as there was previously no business dealing in quality cane furniture, and staff felt they could offer something Delightful: Home and Garden's furnishings are quite unique.

High standard in art contest

MEMBERS of Newmarket Local History Society turned to their town for inspiration for their annual art competition.

Oil paintings, watercolour and ink and pastel works were all submitted drawing on the theme of Aspects of Newmarket – and most drew on Newmarket's Rutland Arms Hotel.

The third annual competition drew nine entries, while last year's contest attracted 40. But Jean Reihan, who judged the competition alongside Sir Mark Prescott and Alan Grundy of the National Horseracing Museum, said what was lacking in quantity was made up for in the quality of the work.

In her speech at the Rutland Arms, she said: "We really were very impressed with the standard. It's just disappointing more people didn't make an effort and do something. They are very good paintings and congratulations to the first three."

Eddie Clark took first place with All Saints Road, October Morning, while Rachel Drury, one of the Horse About Newmarket artists, came second and Peter Ince won third place.

Mr Clark, who organised the contest, said it was a good feeling to win, but said taking part was very important in such competitions. He said: "We try to promote and get people interested in the arts and culture and history of the town, so that's really the main purpose of it rather than artistic expertise."

Base's £214m boost to area

THE RAF Mildenhall community has contributed more than $330m – £214m – to the local economy during the last financial year, new figures have revealed.

A total of 354 officers, 2,600 enlisted personnel, 423 US civilians and 769 local employees stationed at the Mildenhall airbase in various capacities were surveyed for the study, which also took into account the base's contribution to the local economy in terms of creating demand for goods and services in and their impact in terms of buying supplies for the base.

Lt Col Michael Bennett, 100th Comptroller Squadron commander, said: "RAF Mildenhall is committed to contributing to the local economy and our host nation. Our investment in promoting growth in the local economy is part of our obligation to our hosts in return for the continuous support that they have always bestowed.

"We take every opportunity to show we are good neighbours and our mission would not be possible without the support of our gracious hosts."

The total spend in the local economy as a result of the presence of the RAF Mildenhall in the last financial year weighed in at $332.7m, or £215.8m.

The researchers said off-base spending had had a "ripple effect" in the local economy, because businesses are forced to hire extra staff to meet the requirements of customers from the airbase, which has the effect of increasing employment in the area.

The figures suggest RAF Mildenhall contributed to 1,369 indirect jobs in the local area whose value was pinpointed at $58.3 million, or £37.8 million, by the researchers.

They found military personnel alone had spent $110.9 million, or £71.9m, while the figure for US civilian staff was $14.4m, or £9.3m, and $44.2m, or £28.8m for local-national employees.

During the year dealt with in the investigation, RAF Mildenhall was found to have spent $47.5million, or £30.8 million on construction-related items or materials and services, $39.4m, or £25.6m on services, and $18.1m, or £11.7m, on material, equipment and supplies for daily operations.

Hey, Jude

 Jennifer Shelton talks to Tracie Bennett, star of End of the Rainbow at the Cambridge Arts Theatre

FROM freezing Lancashire church halls to the bright lights of Broadway, via the cobbles of Coronation Street, Tracie Bennett's career has been a slow-burning success.

Known to many as the Street's feisty bride Sharon Gaskell, Bennett has recently burst afresh into the public eye with her unanimously acclaimed performance as Judy Garland in the celebrated West End show End of the Rainbow.

The plot homes in on the final weeks of Garland's life which, weighed down by a dependence on alcohol and prescription drugs, has grown ever more turbulent. Poised for another comeback, Garland has come to London to perform at the Talk of the Town with her latest, and youngest, fiancé in tow. Offering alternate insights into her private and public life, End of the Rainbow is a moving, epic portrait of a star in decline.

"She was an icon across the world from the age of 16. I don't know what that's like – nobody does," says Bennett. "Her mother, who was ambitious for her, was plying her with drugs from the age of eight."

"I do have empathy for her; some people just have that addictive gene and that can't be helped. I read an interview with Mickey Rooney recently who said they were all at it – these wonder drugs were coming in, there were no side-effects and everybody lost weight – but some just couldn't stop."

"I've seen people have a sip of wine before a performance, but I can hardly do it sober! To take a drink before is horrifying to me."

"So I feel sorry for her in one sense, and wonder if she couldn't have got help, but on the other hand, that's who these people are, and they're geniuses."

There's nowt as strange as folklore

A NEW play of love, death and folklore opens at the ADC Theatre this week, created by local theatre company Pleasant Danger.

Real Dracula is the story of Jonathan, a young British teacher living in Bucharest, who falls in love with local girl Ileana. While at her uncle's funeral in a remote Transylvanian village, Ileana falls mysteriously ill. With medical help failing and villagers claiming Ileana is the victim of a vampire, how far will Jonathan go to save the woman he loves?

Although the characters are fictional, this chilling story is based on real events which hit the headlines in 2004 when relatives of a deceased Transylvanian school teacher, Petre Toma, became mysteriously ill. Convinced they had a vampire on their hands, residents dug up Toma's corpse, cut out the heart, burnt it and mixed the ashes with water.

The drink was given to the sick relatives, who allegedly made a prompt recovery.

"The events which inspired the play caused quite a stir when they first came to light," says Paul Holloway, co-author and director of Real Dracula. "The story was picked up by newspapers here in the UK, featured in a Discovery Channel documentary and even mentioned in an episode of CSI Las Vegas.

"When I tell people what happened, they cannot believe such things still go on in today's world," adds co-author and producer David Geasor. "And though there are lots of films and TV shows about vampires and vampirism, they rarely take the subject seriously. We do."

Real Dracula is presented by Pleasant Danger Productions, the creative team behind last year's critically-acclaimed Wilde in New York.

Cast members are Priscilla Gray, Mia Keadell, Andy McKeane, Andrea Miller and Oliver Tilney.

■ Real Dracula, ADC Theatre, September 30 and October 1. All performances are at 7.45pm with a Saturday matinee at 2.30pm. Tickets from £6. Contact (01223) 300085.

From roots in rep to West End royalty

■ From Page 22

Sadly, Garland's story of talent strangled by addiction is one which resurfaces time and again. Speaking before Amy Winehouse's death, Bennett brings up the singer's shambolic performance in Belgrade earlier this year.

"Did you see her?" she asks. "I just thought, 'God love you!'. Did you see her eyes? Gone. And you see that in certain footage of Judy."

Bennett's extensive research for the role of Garland – the Minnesota girl, born Frances Gumm, who became one of Hollywood's brightest stars – began 10 years ago when she was asked to play her in a smaller stage production, which today's hit grew out of.

"That play was the embryo of the play we're doing today," she explains. "Some of the scenes are similar, and we knew it was based on Judy Garland, but were worried about libel issues. Anyway, (TV and theatre writer) Peter Quilter re-wrote it, and then the play emerged in the form it's in now."

End of the Rainbow opened in Northampton in 2010, before its successful West End run, which has seen Bennett catapulted from her rep theatre roots to West End royalty. Still, she remains fiercely humble, and as lacking in ego as her alter ego was full of it.

"I've done rep for 30 years and I'd never seen audiences standing up," she confesses, when I bring up the standing ovation she met with on opening night. "I was looking behind me, thinking the band might be doing something!"

"Then I realised, all that training and everything I'd gone through had finally been appreciated. So I've been thrilled with how everything's gone, but it's hard to believe sometimes.

"And it's not just me, it's not a one-woman show," she adds. "I'm delighted for everyone: the crew, the designer, the actors and the producers."

■ End of the Rainbow, Cambridge Arts Theatre, until October 1. For times and tickets call (01223) 503333 or visit www.cambridgeartstheatre.com.

The big film

TINKER TAILOR SOLDIER SPY certificate 15 127m

A NEW adaptation of Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy was always going to raise the hackles of John le Carré purists who adored John Irvin's 1979 mini-series starring Sir Alec Guinness. Tomas Alfredson's film could never compete on an equal footing with its Bafta award-winning predecessor. You can't achieve the same depth of character and plot development in two hours as you can in seven episodes of television. While scriptwriters Bridget O'Connor and Peter Straughan have truncated le Carré's novel, they retain the choking air of suspense that has us holding our breaths until the stunning final frame. Alfredson demonstrates the same virtuosity behind the camera as he did in the 2008 vampire story Let The Right One In. He frames every shot with precision, overhearing conversations in darkened hallways or through walls as if we are the spies, gathering evidence about the characters' wrong-doings.

Control (John Hurt), the chief of a 1970s British Secret Intelligence Service unit known as the Circus, learns that Russian counterpart Karla has placed a mole within the ranks. To unmask the traitor, Control despatches Jim Prideaux (Mark Strong) to Hungary but the agent is shot dead. So Control turns to Smiley (Gary Oldman), and shares intelligence about a possible double agent within the service. Soon after, Control takes his own life, leaving George Smiley to uncover the intrigues of the other Circus members: Percy Alleline (Toby Jones), Roy Bland (Ciaran Hinds, Toby Esterhase (David Dencik) and Bill Haydon (Colin Firth). Aided by the young, ambitious Peter Guillam (Benedict Cumberbatch), Smiley searches for clues, leading to Circus researcher Connie Sachs (Kathy Burke) and missing operative Ricki Tarr (Tom Hardy). Tinker Tailor Soldier Spy is intelligent filmmaking of the highest calibre, distinguished by tour de force performances from the predominantly British cast. Oldman doesn't utter a word for what seems like an eternity but he commands every frame and will be a frontrunner for a Best Actor Oscar. Cumberbatch is a worthy foil, not least in a heart-breaking scene when Peter makes the ultimate sacrifice. Jones, Hinds, Firth et al are excellent in support and Burke scene-steals. Alfredson's directorial brio ensures that while our nerves are wracked, our eyes are dazzled with visually arresting scenes. Pacing is deliberately slow and some audiences, force-fed thrills at breakneck speed by Hollywood, may lose patience.

Living in the outdoors

DITCH your old traditional wood furniture, trusty barbecue and bowling green lawn to make way for carpets of blue, crystal rocking chairs and state-of-the-art cookers in your outside space of the future, which once used to be lovingly called a garden.

Modern garden carpets and outdoor rugs mingle with crystal-like rocking chairs in a riot of colours, oversized outdoor sofas and rubberised tables in the 24-hour garden theme at this year's Grand Designs Live at Birmingham's NEC.

The weird and wacky furniture is accompanied by what can only be described as altars to outdoor dining, featuring enormous barbecues equipped with in-built refrigerators underneath to keep all your beverages and food cold.

Out-of-this-world heating solutions, outdoor lighting and entertainment technology all feature at the heart of the exhibition in Grand Gardens, showing visitors how they can use their garden as an extra entertaining and living space all year round.

The core of the inspiration is The 24 Hour Garden, in which three interactive show gardens transform from day to night in minutes – an 'outdoor living room', complete with a 'floating carpet', the 'tranquil escape', with its unique boulder lounger and driftwood panelled walls, and the 'contemporary kitchen garden for entertaining', with its tea cup wall and bold dining set.

However, there's a limit to extending the season – and no one's going to be out there fine-dining in the pouring rain, agrees award-winning TV garden designer James Alexander-Sinclair, who will be discussing The 24 Hour Garden at this year's show.

"The point of 24-hour gardening is not so much sitting in it, but looking at it. You can sit in your sitting room and power a switch and there you have it."

Does he approve of outdoor garden carpet? There's a large pause followed by a snigger.

"I'm not quite sure what the point of it is," he concedes.

"Outdoor carpet's a marvellous idea if you like outdoor hoovering. But it's part of the idea of the garden being an extra room to the house."

However, he's more open minded to new-fangled furniture making its way into the great outdoors.

"There's something rather wonderful about taking bits of inside outside. I remember one lunch party where we just took all the furniture outside and put it on the lawn. It was weird, wonderful and exciting."

Alexander-Sinclair comes up with somewhat more conventional ways of enjoying your garden all year round, such as placing winter-flowering plants with strong scents like Sarcococca confusa or winter-flowering honeysuckle (Lonicera fragrantissima) near your front door.

"You will catch the scent as you fumble for your front door key – and that is using your garden in the winter.

"Lighting certainly extends the life of the garden as seasons change, so you are not just looking at plants but the effect of light on plants when planning your garden for the year.

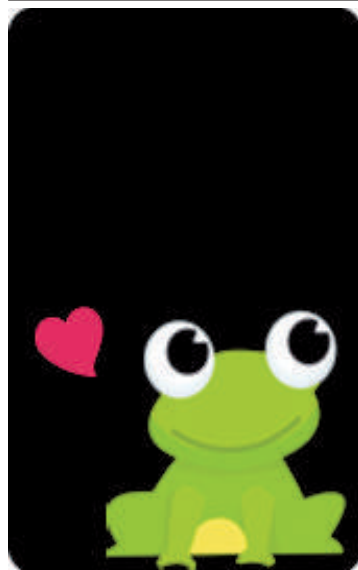

"You can sit there with the fire blazing and if you light your garden properly you can see all the skeletons and shadows of your garden, which extends the life of your garden, as does a pond with a fountain with a light in it."

In winter, clipped hedges such as yew and box look fantastic, even in frost.

"Anything clipped and architectural, with crisp lines, looks good in winter. In summer plants are diaphanous, fluffy and wafting about. It's like people. In summer we all wander about in pretty, floaty things, but in winter we are wrapped up

New Interceptor on way

Much-loved icon to be recreated in UK

A NEW version of a much-loved sports car is to be produced on the site of one of the UK's most famous motor plants, it has been announced.

UK automotive company CPP Global Holdings had already said it was bringing manufacturing back to Jaguar's former Browns Lane site in Coventry.

Yesterday, CPP said it would engineer, develop and build an all-new Jensen Interceptor, with deliveries to customers beginning in 2014.

The announcement is a further boost to the UK motor industry following yesterday's news that Jaguar Land Rover was investing £355 million to build low-emission engines at a business park near Wolverhampton in the West Midlands, potentially creating thousands of new jobs.

A much-admired GT model, the Jensen Interceptor was originally built between 1966 and 1976.

CPP said a team of Coventry-based design consultants employed by the Jensen brand's owners, Healey Sports Cars Switzerland Ltd, had completed the design of the new Interceptor, which has already gained "significant customer interest".

The public unveiling of the Interceptor is planned for late 2012, with deliveries starting in 2014. Annual production numbers and pricing are yet to be confirmed.

Brendan O'Toole, founder and co-owner of CPP, said: "I started my career by restoring bodies and components for classic British sports cars, so for CPP to take the lead role in reviving this iconic brand is very exciting for the business, and for me personally.

"The Jensen design team has respected and honoured the great heritage and attributes of the original Interceptor, while injecting a contemporary edge and advanced technologies that will ensure it appeals to the passionate, discerning motoring enthusiast of today."

CPP, which already has five existing facilities in Coventry, owns the Bowler off-road vehicle company and is negotiating to acquire sports car company Spyker.

It is currently purchasing 23 acres at Browns Lane from the regional development agency, Advantage West Midlands.

Keen pricing as new Zafira waits on runway

THE entry-level version of the new Vauxhall Zafira Tourer will undercut the price of its main rival, the Ford S-Max, by £1,200.

Despite the cost-cutting, the 138bhp Zafira Tourer ES 1.8 will come equipped with an excellent range of kit as standard, including air conditioning, DAB radio, cruise control, MP3 connections, six airbags, a seven-speaker sound system, active headrests and the handy Flex7 seating found in the smaller Zafira.

Longer, wider and more expensive than the Zafira, the Zafira Tourer is designed to be Vauxhall's premier people-mover, with higher levels of luxury, space and equipment. It uses 'key components' from the Insignia, which seem to include the basic chassis layout.

The Insignia's platform is a large one, so it's no surprise that the Zafira Tourer is described by Vauxhall as "overwhelmingly airy" inside. On the outside, it's 19cm longer than a standard Zafira.

More emphasis is being placed on safety in the Tourer, with a plethora of driver-assist systems making a first appearance in the new model.

Traffic Sign Recognition,

Side Blind Spot Alert and Advance Park Assist – which helps drivers find an adequate parking space and guides them in to it – are among potential highlights, but they are likely to be cost options.

There will be 1.8-litre and turbocharged 1.4-litre petrol engines, alongside a 2.0-litre diesel engine with three different power outputs. One of the diesels is an EcoFlex version that emits 119g/km of CO2, reducing running costs.

The Ford S-Max is priced from £22,295.

Shocking rises in insurance costs

NEW research from Confused.com has found the cheapest cars to insure for 17-20 year olds.

The Ford Ka2 topped the leader board followed closely by the Peugeot 107. However Confused.com's data shows the worst car to run if you're a young driver and looking for low insurance prices is the Honda Civic. This research is capped and based on vehicles between the values of £600 to £10,000.

Car insurance costs for young drivers hit record highs in the second quarter this year, with 17-20 year olds paying as much as four times the average amount for car insurance.

The Confused/Towers Watson price index shows that motor insurance based on a 17-20 year old male is now £4,006 per year for comprehensive cover, highlighting the need for research when buying a car.

To help young drivers, Confused.com has undertaken research to give teenagers a helping hand and unveiled the five cheapest and most expensive cars to insure for 17-20 year olds – and with Confused.com 50 per cent of under 25s could save up to £594 on car insurance premiums.

TOP FIVE CHEAPEST CARS TO INSURE FOR 17-20 YEAR OLDS
Ford Ka2: £1,651.40
Ford Ka: £1,781.25
Peugeot 107: £1,994.42
Daewoo Matiz: £2,258.26

The Honda Civic: Number one insurance nightmare for young drivers.

Mini One: £2,268.85

TOP FIVE MOST EXPENSIVE CARS TO INSURE FOR 17-20 YEAR OLDS
Honda Civic: £4,515.92
Volkswagen Golf: £3,928.30
Vauxhall Astra: £3,722.97
Ford Focus: £3,677.06
Renault Mégane: £3,327.21

Gareth Kloet, head of car insurance at Confused.com, says: "Young drivers and learners are telling us that the cost of insurance is the biggest barrier to getting behind the wheel: more so than the cost of buying the car."

"Buying your first car should be exciting, not a worry about whether you can afford the insurance costs. Here at confused.com we want to offer young drivers the chance to find the perfect car with the cheapest insurance."

"Once the car has been found drivers should shop around for cover as premiums can vary greatly between providers; a comparison site is a great way to do this."

The Volkswagen Jetta: Top towcar as voted by the Caravan Club.

Jetta wins showcase 'Towcar of Year' title

THE Volkswagen Jetta Sport 2.0TDI DSG took the top honour in its price Class and went on to be voted overall winner of the 29th Caravan Club Towcar of the Year Competition.

It was judged the winner by a panel of 11 judges who applauded its suave design, its practicality as a caravanning family car and its great performance when towing in a variety of situations.

Held, as in previous years, at the Millbrook Proving Ground in Bedfordshire, the Competition attracted 30 entrants.

Class wins in the Competition also went to the Skoda Superb Estate Elegance 2.0 DSG; the Volkswagen Touareg Escape 3.0 V6 TDI and the Volvo V60 D5 AWD Volvo Ocean Race.

From these Class winners the sleek, stylish and very capable Volkswagen Jetta Sport emerged as the overall victor.

The results of the competition were announced at The Caravan Club Awards ceremony at the Royal Automobile Club in London on Wednesday.

Special guest, former Formula 1 driver Johnny Herbert, attended the testing regime at Millbrook and then presented the prized Class awards to representatives from the winning manufacturers at the Awards ceremony.

Johnny Herbert says: "It was a real eye-opener being at Millbrook seeing all the cars being put through their paces, they really are put to the towing test."

Of course, producing a good car for towing isn't just about having lots of torque and large door mirrors. Because the very business of towing a caravan or trailer requires extra concentration and demands lower average speeds, making journeys longer – all of which puts extra strain on the driver.

The Towcar of the Year awards, now in their 30th year, are not so much about trophy winning, more an invaluable and a definitive guide for members of the Caravan Club.

There are two parts to the judging, and two sets of judges. The first, caravanability – a word which doesn't yet appear in any English dictionary but perfectly summarises the testing and measuring of the competing cars' load space, cargo access, seating, towball and cable anchorage, nose-weight, and operating costs.

Furthermore, to ensure all the cars compete on a 'level playing field', ballast is then added to replicate the weight of an average family, and their luggage.

Second, it was the turn of the driving judges. With each car hitched to the same model of Bailey caravan, acceleration, stability and emergency braking could be performed in the safe environment on Millbrook's high-speed bowl.

The cars' traction and handling was further tested on the Alpine pass – a secluded ribbon of twisting tarmac with heroic inclines and taxing descents.

After all the exercises are completed, marks are then awarded, with the highest scoring cars taking the honours in their individual price classes.

From the list of class winners the judges all then vote on their personal choice for Towcar of the Year.

The class winners all delivered strongly in the various tests, but the overall prize went to the Volkswagen Jetta Sport 2.0-litre TDI DSG – hardly surprising as it combines refinement, comfort, sound driving dynamics and genuine kerb appeal with the obvious diesel power and its super-smart DSG transmission.

CLASS WINNERS OF THE 2012 TOW CAR OF THE YEAR

Class 1: Cars under £25,000

Volkswagen Jetta Sport 2.0-litre TDI DSG

Class 2: Cars between £25,000-£32,000

Skoda Superb Estate Elegance 2.0-litre TDI DSG

Class 3: Cars over £32,000

VW Touareg Escape 3.0-litre V6 TDI AWD: all-wheel drive vehicles with a tow capacity under 1,800kgs

Volvo V60 D5 AWD Ocean Race

AWD2: All-wheel drive vehicle with a tow capacity over 1,800kgs

The California Berghaus: A whole lot of value with a £47,995 price tag.

Explore with the Berghaus

AS the weather starts to take a turn for the worse and those long summer nights and festivals seem a distant memory, you can still enjoy the great outdoors as Volkswagen adds the limited edition Berghaus to the versatile California range.

Created in collaboration with the outdoor clothing specialist, the California Berghaus has been specially developed to be the ultimate vehicle for exploring and enjoying the outdoors in comfort and style.

All Berghaus models are fitted with the familiar 2.0-litre BiTDI 176bhp engine and six-speed manual transmission, which returns 36.2mpg on the combined cycle with CO2 emissions of 205g/km. Acceleration to 62mph takes 12.4 seconds while the top speed is 117mph.

Priced at £47,995, the Berghaus model is the first ever special edition California. Details at www.volkswagen-vans.co.uk.

Your CV

When you send your CV off to a potential employer, remember that you won't be the only one. Hundreds of other people could be applying for the job as well.

So what are you going to do to make you stand out from the crowd? Why should an employer take a chance on you instead of someone else?

Your CV is your first real chance to sell yourself to a potential employer. Most employers will scan through a CV in about 30 seconds so you need to grab their attention from the start - and make them want to invite you for an interview.

There are five main areas to consider when writing your CV:

- Make sure your CV looks the part. Your CV should look clean and tidy - don't scrawl it out on a piece of A4 paper. If you haven't got access to a PC or printer, ask a friend or use your local library. Use a good quality paper and steer clear of fancy borders and front covers.
- Watch out for silly spelling and grammar mistakes. They make you look lazy and show employers that you don't really care. It's not difficult to do a spell check on your PC and if you're really stuck then don't just guess, reach for a dictionary. Get a friend to read through your CV for you - a second opinion is always useful.
- Make sure your CV is well organised. When you list your previous jobs, make sure the dates are correct and try not to leave any gaps. If you took time out to go travelling then say so - employers won't mark you down just because you've tried something new.
- Don't waffle. Remember that employers don't have time to read every word of your CV. Long paragraphs and sentences put people off, so try bullet-points to break up text. Make sure your CV is no longer than two pages long - employers don't want your life history, they just want to see that you've got what it takes to do the job.
- Don't list any failures. Employers have enough trouble finding someone who is right for the job - they don't need help finding reasons not to employ you. If you have to include a mistake from your past, make sure you show the employer that you learnt something from the experience.

Keep it simple

Personal details

Start off with your full name, address, date of birth, home and mobile phone numbers, email address and nationality. If you are offered an interview, the employer will want to get hold of you so give him as many options as possible.

Summary/professional profile

This is the No1 area for selling yourself. Set out your main skills and personal qualities but keep it interesting and tight - one paragraph should do to cover everything.

Education and qualifications

List your qualifications and education history, with the most recent first. You don't need to list the grades for each exam you have passed unless they were exceptional results - simply listing the number and type of exams you've passed is fine. Also, list any relevant professional organisations you belong to and training courses you have been on.

Work experience

Start with your most recent position and work backwards, giving addresses along with start and finish dates. Set out your main responsibilities, duties and most importantly achievements, along with any skills you picked up or improvements you made while you were there. This is a really important section in your CV so make it count - but don't waffle.

If you have not had a full-time job before, detail any part-time jobs you may have held or any placement you have been on.

Other skills

Set out any computer skills you may have and the software you are most familiar with. Can you type, do shorthand or speak a foreign language fluently? If you have a driving licence, let the employer know. If it's clean, tell them.

Interests & hobbies

Briefly list what you get up to in your spare time. Put down any positions you hold in clubs or associations, along with any responsibilities and achievements.

References

Make sure you have at least two people (including one from your previous or current job) who will tell an employer what a thoroughly nice person you are and what a potential asset to the company you would be.

If you want to list them now make sure you include their name, job title, postal & e-mail address and contact phone numbers. Alternatively, just put "Available on request" so the employer knows to follow up references at a later date.

Add a covering letter

The main aim of a covering letter is to encourage an employer to give you a chance. You want them to read your CV, so sell it to them. You should always enclose a covering letter when applying for a job - most employers won't consider you unless you do.

A covering letter should let the employer know why you are interested in the job and why you think you can do it.

The hints and tips below should point you in the right direction:

- Keep it simple. A covering letter should be short and to the point - no more than six paragraphs.
- Mention the job. If you are replying to an advert, mention what the job is and where you saw it. The company may be advertising for other positions and it may not be clear which job you are applying for.
- Sell yourself. Explain why you are the perfect candidate for the job. Show off your strengths and experience. Refer to your CV - if it goes missing then at least an employer will know that you've sent it.
- Check it for mistakes. A silly spelling mistake in a covering letter is likely to cost you your chance of getting an interview. Also, make sure it is addressed to the right person in the right department.

A covering letter can be just as important as a CV in getting you an interview. It's your first point of contact with your potential employer - so make it count.

It's No4 for super Crisp

TOBY Crisp rounded off a great season by lifting the Wheeler Salver at Gog Magog's Old Course.

Crisp, from Newmarket's Links club, saw off Cambridgeshire B-team captain James Stammers by two holes in the final.

It was Crisp's fourth big win of the campaign – he had already clinched the County Foursomes with John Ostler as well as the County Open and January Cup.

He took an early three-hole lead, but a third successive birdie two by Stammers cut the advantage to two holes at the turn.

A further birdie on the 11th saw Stammers creep closer, only to drive out of bounds on the next hole.

Crisp was two up with three holes to play, but pitched the ball into the right-hand trap to give Stammers hope of a late comeback.

But he held on to his one-hole lead and the match was all but over when Stammers badly sliced his drive into the trees on the final hole. Crisp needed a straightforward par to claim the title and duly hit a wedge shot within 15ft for victory and a round of 67.

Tight at top in title race

THREE riders are jostling for pole position as the Mildenhall club's off-road championship heads towards the final two rounds.

Competitors raced against the clock in the uphill and downhill rounds in Mildenhall Woods, but with leader Barry Archer on timekeeping duties, closest rival Dave Bowers was third fastest up and down, earning 16 points.

He is now on 61 points, just two behind Archer, with both completing eight events in the 12-round series, where the best eight scores count. However, Matthew Mantle who was competing in the final round of the Mud Sweat & Gears series, already has 60 points from six events.

Caine makes a point

MICHAEL Caine made an eventful debut in the British Touring Car Championship at Rockingham, finishing 10th in his first race and securing a point for the Airwaves Racing team. Despite having had little time to get accustomed to his Ford Focus, the Newmarket driver cut through the field after starting from 18th on the grid.

As a result, he started race two in 10th. But a problem with the car's turbo, coupled with damage to a rear wheel caused by a collision with Rob Collard's BMW, resulted in him retiring on lap 10.

In the third race he started 22nd out of 26, but tyre wear hampered his progress and a late puncture resulted in him finishing 20th.

Newmarket try spree

Newmarket Colts 47 Swaffham 0

NEWMARKET made a superb start to their season with a seven-try blitz of Swaffham. Jack Wade, who also kicked six conversions, started things off with Sam Hilary and T J Rowling, who ran from his own 22m line to touch down under the posts, building a 21-0 lead at the break. Rowling and Wade both added second tries before Henry Le Havas-Morai and Connor Byrne completed the victory.

>> Athletics

NEWMARKET Joggers made sure six months of hard graft and planning came to successful fruition when they made a tremendous debut in the unique Round Norfolk Relay race.

The club had never been invited to the 195-mile marathon – which this year was celebrating its 25th anniversary – yet Joggers marked their debut by completing the arduous course, which starts and finishes in King's Lynn and winds out along the county boundary, in 24hr 42min 53sec, finishing 23rd out of the 57 teams and second among the newcomers.

"The sense of achievement at, not only completing the challenge, but doing so successfully made up for all the hard work that had gone into organising the event and the lack of sleep," said a club spokesman.

"For a small club like the Newmarket Joggers to pull together and compete at the highest level is a massive undertaking, and shows how far the club has come in recent years. We finished with much credibility, gaining respect from other clubs who congratulated us on our achievement."

Preparation for the race started with all 17 runners either running or walking their stages beforehand while the support crew of six kept time and drove the competitors to their various stations where they would collect the baton after seasoned marathon runner Keith Williams set them on their way on the 16.81 mile stretch to the cliffs at Hunstanton.

He reached the coastal resort in 2hrs 14min, handing over to Norfolk lad Neville Clare, whose 14.06mile stretch along coastal paths took him to Burnham Overy and Jason Beeton. Hardly conserving any energy for the Great North Run, which he completed the following day, Beeton completed his 5.76mile leg over sand dunes and undulating terrain to Wells in 41min 59 sec.

That was where Lisa Redman took over, and her 11.14mile coastal stage – which bypassed a pirate carnival – to the shingle beach at Cley was completed in 1hr 42min. Ursula White picked up the baton for the notoriously difficult 10.81mile slog over single and sand to Cromer, where a Red Arrows fly-past helped her finish in 1:33.01. Julie Sheldrick gave her personal support crew lots to cheer where she finished her 7.9mile stint to Mundesley in 62min – well under her predicted time – providing Susannah Rush with the impetus to run her 9.24mile stage to Lessingham in a personal best 70min. With darkness and bad weather looming, Adrian Whittle then set off for a 7.52mile leg which nearly came to a premature end when he was almost hit by a startled stag. However he did not miss a stride and after 61min he handed over to the waiting Neil Williamson in Horsey, who negotiated roads which had been under water minutes earlier. He clocked 1: 25min for the 11.3miles to the prom in Great Yarmouth.

listings. Everything was looking good for the team when Holley was to hand over in Bungay to Alan Shand, who completed the 54-mile Comrades Marathon in May. However, seven miles in to his 14.6mile stage to Scole, he suffered severe stomach cramps but battled on to finish in 2hr 7min and hand over to Greg Davis.

Although overtaken by a runner from the Bishop's Stortford club, Davis kept his rival in sight, and three miles from the end of the 19.67mile stage, swept past to reclaim his place and finish in in Thetford in 2hr 7min. Brian Munns took over and, setting off at a fair rate of knots, passed several teams along the outskirts of Thetford Forest and cruised into Feltwell in 1hr 30min where Steve Edwards set off for the 8.8mile stretch to Wixington, which he completed, despite feeling nauseous, in 65min. With early-morning mist rising, Noel Benn took off on the 7.2mile leg along twisting roads to Downham Market where, 52 minutes later, he handed the baton over to Sue Stoten, who clipped two minutes off the predicted time for her 5.49mile stint to Stow Bridge, clocking 48min.

As the sun finally burned through the mist, Vincent Coogan set off on the final 11.73mile stage at an equally hot pace – starting off at a staggering 5.55min per mile pace and crossing the finish line at Lynnsport Leisure Centre in 69min.

Holden takes a grip as Town turn on the style

Newmarket 6 Boston 0

East Men's League, Division 4NW

MATT Holden slammed a hat-trick as Newmarket made a flying start to the season.

Moving the ball quickly and at pace, Town finally broke down a resilient defence and outstanding goalkeeper to lay down a marker for the season, although they felt more work was needed on their short corners to make the most of their dominance.

They even managed to weather Boston pressure when they were reduced to 10 men after centre-forward Mike Skelton was yellow-carded after being harshly judged to have stopped a ball above his shoulder. Holden scored both goals in the first half – the first rounding off a neat team move and the second from a penalty corner after he was set up by Will Wilson. The second half was virtually Newmarket v the Boston keeper as the visitors struggled to get out of their own 25.

Holden's hat-trick goal – the fourth – was sandwiched by two strikes from Alex Andreou with Mark Pears adding the sixth just before the final whistle.

■ The men's second team opened up with a 3-0 win at St Neots III in Division 6NW(S).

St Ives II 0 Newmarket 1

Cambs Women's League, Premier Division

A WELL-WORKED goal was the difference between sides, who had several opportunities to alter the scoreline.

In the early stages, Town keeper Jess Boyle was the busier keeper but as the half wore on the visitors adapted to new positions and started to produce their own chances, Hayley Stoneman and Claire McDonnell both being denied by the agile keeper.

After a goalless first half, Town kept St Ives pinned in their own half for 10 minutes and were eventually rewarded with the only goal.

A move involving Isabel Hooley, Stoneman, Di Thomas and Becca Swift ended with McDonnell crossing for Lucy Brown to tuck the ball away.

The goal gave Newmarket a massive boost, but did not kill off St Ives, who forced a stunning goal-line stop from Zoe Bailey in their bid for an equaliser.

Newmarket II 0

Suffolk Premier League

KEEPER Sue Bullimore kept Newmarket in the game as Grasshoppers turned up the heat.

She pulled off a series of fine saves but was unable to prevent Town from trailing 2-0 at the break.

The second half, though, was a different story with Newmarket playing hockey that was more worthy of a Premier League team, although they were not able to get the goals to make their efforts worthwhile.

NEWMARKET are anticipating big things this season after opening their league campaign with a hard-fought draw.

They dominated possession, the new players who have graduated from the junior teams settling in well to give hope for the future.

In the pink: Burwell under-16s have made a flying start to their S-Tech Cambs Girls League season, edging out Water-beach 3-2 and walloping Bar Hill 11-2. This year they are backed by two sponsors – the kit is from Suffolk Independent Midwives while training jackets have been provided by the Newmarket construction firm, Britaniabuild. CP

Dry spell could stop Nathaniel

JOHN Gosden accepts the week-long forecast for Paris could prevent Nathaniel from taking his chance in the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe on Sunday, if the ground is too quick.

Gosden was due to make his decision today (Thursday), with the colt likely to be rerouted to Ascot on October 15 for the QIPCO Champion Stakes if the arid outlook is correct.

"The horse is in good form," said Gosden.

"But the key factor for a lot of us is the weather. If the ground is on the fast side there he won't run.

"But we do still have the Champion Stakes, which is a pretty nice fall-back position."

On the other side of the coin, Ed Dunlop's Snow Fairy wants the ground to stay fast as does Frankie Dettori. With Godolphin unlikely to have a runner, he is pencilled in for the ride, maintaining a run which has seen him go to post for the last 23 Arcs.

■ Jockeys will face stiffer penalties for use of the whip in new rules being introduced on October 10 following a 10-month review by the British Horseracing Authority.

The whip can only be used a maximum of seven times in a Flat race, and eight times in a jumps race and only five times in the last furlong or after the last obstacle.

This halves the amount of times a whip could be used previously while there will be a minimum five-day minimum suspension for not adhering to the frequency limits. Penalties will increase for those who breach the rules more than once, and the second offence will be double a first offence.

Use of the whip came under scrutiny when Jason Maguire was suspended for five days after striking Ballabriggs 17 times when winning the John Smith's Grand National at Aintree in April. Dettori was banned for nine days after he hit Rewilding 24 times inside the final two furlongs of the Prince of Wales's Stakes at Royal Ascot.

Dettori said: "I am not proud of having fallen foul of the whip rules in the past, but I have never harmed a horse. These new rules are easy to understand which will help all jockeys ride within them."

■ Clive Brittain has decided against letting Saturday's Newmarket winner Alsindi travel to France to contest this weekend's Prix Marcel Bousac.

Pearl's a winner: Johnny Murtagh keeps Lightning Pearl on course for victory in the Cheveley Park Stakes at Newmarket on Saturday.

FLYING LIGHTENING STRIKES FOR LYONS

GER Lyons and owner Sheikh Fahad al-Thani claimed their first Group One when the supplemented Lightning Pearl (3-1) took the Jaguar Cars Cheveley Park Stakes on Saturday.

It was No 99 at the highest level for jockey Johnny Murtagh, who just survived a thunderous late challenge from Sunday Times, whose trainer Peter Chapple-Hyam lamented: "I wish the race had been six furlongs and 10 yards."

Lightning Pearl is now a best-priced 20-1 with Ladbrokes and William Hill for the 1000 Guineas.

■ A week before his ride on likely favourite Sarafina in the Prix de l'Arc de Triomphe, Christophe Lemaire claimed an early Group One taster at Newmarket on Saturday as Sahpresa became the first horse to win the Kingdom of Bahrain Sun Chariot Stakes three times.

The filly and trainer Rod Collet were both virtual unknowns when she opened her account on the Rowley Mile at 16-1 in 2009, but she has become a familiar sight and scooted home as the 13-8 favourite.

■ Solving the riddle of the 32-runner Betfred Cambridgeshire was always going to be a rather more difficult task and not too many on the Rowley Mile were cheering home Tom Tate's 40-1 shot Prince Of Johanne.

■ The two Tattersalls Millions races are the highlights of Saturday's card on the Rowley Mile (first race 1.50pm).

We weren't good enough: Grainger

Halstead Tn 2 Newmarket Tn 0
FA Vase, second qualifying round

KEVIN Grainger was unhappy with his team's performance as Newmarket succumbed to a goal in each half at Halstead.

The Jockeys' boss saw a couple of half-chances fall James Lane's way, but a lack of quality in the final third cost them. "We weren't good enough," said Grainger. "Everyone knows we've got injuries, but we didn't pressure them enough. It wasn't acceptable."

The Jockeys are at home to Woodbridge in the Ridgeons League on Saturday before travelling to Diss on Tuesday.

Gorleston 2 Mildenhall Town 4 (aet)
FA Vase, second qualifying round

JAMES Paterson created a goal and scored one himself as Mildenhall defeated Gorleston in extra time.

The midfielder delivered a dangerous cross into the mix early in the first period of extra time and saw the ball diverted into his own net by a home defender. That made it 3-2 and Paterson confirmed the win for the visitors in the second 15-minute period when he side-footed home after his initial effort had hit the post.

Andrew Wood had equalised to make it 1-1 at half time and Owen Paynter scored a penalty after he was upended in the box, but scored late on to force extra time. Christian Appleford's team will now host Wroxham.

Mildenhall are at home to Clacton in the Ridgeons League on Saturday before travelling to Walsham le Willows on Wednesday.

Parry double all in vain again

Sudbury 19 Newmarket 15

London League 3NE

JOSH Parry pounced for two tries for Newmarket, but they still lost.

He got both his scores in the first half, with Liam Cocks adding a conversion, and the match was all square at 12-12 at half time.

Sudbury got what turned out to be the winning converted try early in the second half when a forward trundled through, with tacklers hanging off him, to cross the line.

Cocks kicked a penalty to reduce the arrears, but they could not convert their chances to get the win.

Team manager Gareth Godfrey said:

"We went over expecting to get soundly beaten, but to go over there and play well and come close was good.

"But we can't afford to come close on too many times as the gap is already six points. We're not panicking just yet but we would like to get a win soon."

Tigers find edge as final sparks bust-up

Mildenhall 51 Stoke 43
Knockout Cup final, first leg

SIMON Lambert's dangerous move into the side of Jack Hargreaves in heat 13 was the catalyst for an absorbing cup final to spill on to the terraces.

West Row's biggest crowd for five years witnessed Mildenhall stun Stoke with four consecutive maximums to lead 38-20 in the first leg, before the Potters hit back with two tactical ride successes and their 7-2 results reduced the margin to eight points.

It was at that point Hargreaves (pictured) got ahead of the unbeaten Lambert, but the Stoke rider kept a straight line to take out Hargreaves and two other riders. Referee Christina Turnbull adjudged that no-one was at fault, which sparked jeers from the home fans and Lambert responded with gestures.

A collective mix of riders, mechanics, stewards and supporters then got involved in altercations as the fixture threatened to spiral out of control.

Mildenhall had made the most of Stoke being reduced to one reserve and a middle-order weakness, but Stoke's tactical successes in heats 11 and 12 threw them a lifeline.

Daniel Halsey rescued second place with a determined dive under Jamie Pickard on the penultimate bend in heat 11, and Aaron Baseby also split the visitors' pairing in heat 12 after Joe Jacobs damaged his shoulder in a high-side fall.

Halsey went on to produce another spectacular last-bend pass on Sergeant in heat 15 to give his side an eight-point lead to defend in next month's return leg.

Fen Tigers' promoter Michael Lee said: "We're upset, as we were a long way in front, but they gave their all.
